WHO WE ARE

Makeamo Professional Services was established in 2020 after spending a significant amount of time studying the Occupational Health and Hygiene management programs. Makeamo Professional Services was created amidst the scare of COVID-19 pandemic. It is bringing with it the solutions to curb the spread of COVID-19 as the country is lifting the lockdown levels to levels where there will be more interaction in the workplaces, public areas including the schooling environment. Health and hygiene issues (lawsuits and court settlements) impact on the margins of companies regardless of the size and COVID-19 cannot be left out.

The founder of the company has worked in various consulting, manufacturing, mining and constructions companies since 2005. During the time of employment, shortfalls were identified and thus came an idea to establish a company with operation strategies to deliver cost effective and comprehensive Occupational Health and Hygiene advisory and training services.

The company has successfully designed its service provision in a professional structure where by our clients shall find satisfaction on implementation and management of effective and comprehensive Occupational Health and Hygiene systems. Our team including management is comprised of individuals who are experienced in the Occupational Health and Hygiene field. We render our service with professionalism and dedication to reflect our mission statement and vision going along with our goals and objectives.

SERVICES

Occupational Health and Hygiene Advisory services

To develop, where required, and lead implementation of effective occupational health systems to contribute to the protection of the health of workers, noting that, the underlying principal should be to eliminate worker exposure through engineering, design or isolating employees from hazards where feasible and using personal protective equipment as a last resort only when other controls are not practical.

To provide occupational health and hygiene information and advice to clients to help promote a healthy workplace. This may involve

- ▶ Recommending and coordinating hygiene surveys and health risk assessments
- ▶ Requesting workplace monitoring to assess exposure to various hazards
- ▶ Reviewing and disseminating appropriate legislation and standards for clients
- ▶ Decreasing legal vulnerability

To increase organizational knowledge of occupational health and hygiene by:

- ▶ Performing and leading health risk prevention audits
- ▶ Developing health and hygiene training material
- ▶ Encouraging co-operation between units to enable sharing and transfer of knowledge
- ▶ Ensure that occupational health legal obligations are known and highlight deficiencies and recommend improvements where appropriate.

COVID-19- Compliance services

In light with the current pandemic we are faced with employers are expected to ensure that the spread of Covid-19 is minimised and there are stringent standards set by the government that companies required to comply with and there is a lack of expertise in implementing the strategies and plan to ensure compliance.

Companies are set to resume production amidst this challenging period. Corona virus is yet to be listed as a hazardous biological agent however the situation has been declared a national disaster. The declaration requires measures to be taken to address the virus at the workplace. Those industries that where producing, processing, using, handling, storing or transporting hazardous biological agent might be better prepared for the current situation. Unfortunately, it is a new space for any other industry. This microorganism falls within subdivision 4, where the virus can cause severe disease, spread to the community and prophylaxis or vaccine is not available. Government has placed protocols to be followed to curb the incident within the workplace, however as indicated earlier this is uncharted territories. Therefore, extreme measures are required especially that a company with an infection is required to close. Government is yet to issue the level of closure, whether temporarily (re-open after disinfection and being cleared for safety) or permanently till moving to the next level of lockdown.
